Richard Cox (with gun) and Joseph Ragno in Feedlot.

by Eileene Winters

The Back Alley Theatre in Van Nuys has come up with yet another prestigious production. Feedlot, the play by Patrick Meyer, deals with a college boy who tries to take over control of a cattle feedlot, to make a point about society. The conflict between him and the redneck bully who has doubts about his masculinity is gripping drama. Richard Cox and Joseph Ragno have great vitality and competence as the two misfits. Allan Miller and Laura Zucker did their usual fine work as director and producer.
